The Challenge

Biotechnology, pharmaceutical, clinical research, medical device, life science and healthcare companies share a unique set of challenges in the global market place.

Strict regulatory compliance, precision, quality, time-to-market and stringent cost control are just some of the difficulties that make partnering with a medical language expert vital to your success.

The Solution

OMNIA has access to an impressive network of linguists and translators with extensive medical and scientific expertise. We adopt a centralized project management methodology to coordinate the simultaneous delivery of multiple language versions of documentation.

The OMNIA solution is cost effective and time efficient. This is achieved by:

- A dedicated production team underpinned by a robust project management methodology
- Effective resource management, allocation and recruitment
- Quality Assurance based on the application of ISO 9001:2015 - Quality management systems; ISO 17100:2017 - Translation services
- Leverage of web-based language asset management tools such as query and terminology management and translation memory.

OMNIA delivers consistently high quality localized content to meet the most exacting criteria.

Translation Process

OMNIA's translation process for life sciences documentation is based on the following best practices:

- Two independent linguists translate the content for each target language
- The linguists meet to discuss and arrive at a common version
- An independent linguist back translates into source language
- Discrepancies are identified and referred back to the original translators
- The translation is sent to customers for review
- The linguists implement corrections and update Translation Memories.

Additionally, OMNIA project managers and customers meet to analyse accuracy, quality and time-to-market of translations.
